

Jareese K. Stroud

Jareese is the Program Manager for the Community Voices and Men's Health Initiative. She was the second member to join the Community Voices team as it transitioned from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation to the National Center for Primary Care at Morehouse School of Medicine. Under the leadership of Henrie M. Treadwell, Director of Community Voices, Jareese works to ensure the productivity and long-term sustainability of the program. She firmly supports the vision of Community Voices by applying her experience in the areas of management, administration, communication, and strategic development/planning.

Jareese is a native of Chicago, Illinois. She migrated to Atlanta, Georgia in August 1998 in pursuit of a higher education. She attended Morris Brown College where she graduated Cum Laude in June 2002 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Communications. She was the recipient of many honors and awards for her leadership as well as academic studies.

Upon graduating Jareese joined Morehouse School of Medicine on a temporary assignment and is now in her sixth tenure and fifth tenure with Community Voices. Jareese is proud of the many accomplishments she has made while at Community Voices. She is even more enthused about Community Voices' future endeavors as they proceed to meet their goal of health care for the underserved.
