

Kisha B. Holden, Ph.D.

Dr. Kisha Braithwaite is associate director for Community Voices and assistant professor of clinical psychiatry and mental health policy analyst at the National Center for Primary Care at Morehouse School of Medicine, which promotes excellence in community primary health care and improved access to comprehensive services, with a special focus on underserved populations and eliminating health disparities. She earned her doctorate degree from Howard University and completed a post-doctoral fellowship at The Johns Hopkins University. She brings several years of experience as a clinician and community-based researcher, working with children, adolescents, and adults. Dr. Braithwaite has extensive experience in evaluation research, and is co-owner of Evaluation Research Associates, Inc. Her research is focused on mood and anxiety disorders, HIV/AIDS, and youth violence prevention. Dr. Braithwaite has published in several peer-reviewed journals; and she is committed to promoting the health and well-being of culturally diverse families and the development of strategies to informing policy.